ENDODONTIC SYMPOSIUM 2019

Friday 18 October 2019

Endodontic and Restorative Techniques: Preserving the Natural Tooth

Continuing Education in Dentistry and Henry Schein Halas are pleased to present the 6th in a series of Endodontic Symposia. The symposium will bring together some of Australia's most trusted and respected specialists in endodontics and prosthodontics

This one-day program is both practical and topical. The core aim of the day is to provide the general practitioner with everyday solutions and "take home" treatment techniques for maintaining the form and function of the natural tooth. There will be six key presentations where the latest trends, procedures and developments in endodontics are discussed. The day will also feature an interactive panel discussion. Following the lectures there will be multiple sessions where clinical techniques will be demonstrated including "hands on" participation, providing hints and tips that you can immediately incorporate into your practice to provide better endodontic and restorative treatment.

Presentations:

- Endodontic diagnosis and treatment in 3D
- Endodontic access: opening the door to endodontic treatment
- The what, how, why and when of apex locators as it relates to endodontic success!
- When you think it's the end, think again: re-treatment techniques to save the natural tooth
- What happens when there is no root canal to treat: current trends in endodontic microsurgery
- Some disturbing trends in the restoration of the endodontically treated tooth
